CHAP. III.

OF FINES.

I.

Ordinary members, if abſent, incur a fine of ſixpence each roll call, but have a liberty of marking an appeal in the fine book for the inſpection of the committee. If not valid, the member appealing ſhall incur the penalty of one ſhilling.

II.

If any member be diſſatisfied with the deciſion of the committee, he may appeal to the Society at large; and if the Society ſhall confirm their decree, the member ſo appealing ſhall be fined in double the original ſum, excluſive of the fine inflicted by the committee.

III.

Any ordinary member reſiding in Edinburgh, who abſents for three whole nights, without leave of abſence, and without making an appeal within that period, unleſs confined to bed, ſhall incur a fine of five ſhillings, in addition to the fines of roll call.

CHAP. IV.

OF PRESIDENTS.

I.

The election of preſidents ſhall take place the laſt meeting in November, after the following manner. Each member ſhall, according to ſeniority, give in a liſt of the four members, whom he thinks beſt qualified for that office; the five oldeſt members ſhall form a committee to examine, in preſence of the Society, the number of votes for each, after which the chairman ſhall report.

II.

They ſhall officiate by turns according to ſeniority; and if the preſident in rotation be abſent at the hour of meeting, without having obtained another preſident to act in his place, he ſhall incur a fine of two ſhillings and ſixpence.

III.

The preſident ſhall regulate the debates, and for any irregularities he may impoſe a fine, not exceeding two ſhillings and ſixpence.

IV.

The preſident ſhall cenſure any perſonalities or unpolite expreſſions, thrown out in the courſe of the debate; and if the offending member ſhall refuſe to make ſuch conceſſions as the majority of the Society ſhall think proper, he ſhall be expelled.

V.

Any member diſſatisfied with the conduct of a preſident, may accuſe him. The accuſation ſhall be judged of by an extraordinary meeting: And if it has been made with a view to his depoſition, and found groundleſs, the accuſer ſhall pay ten ſhillings and ſixpence.

VI.

Any member reflecting publicly on the conduct of the preſident, without accuſing him, ſhall pay ten ſhillings and ſixpence.

VII.

The preſident may grant leave of abſence to one in ten of the members preſent.

VIII.

If the preſident, while in the chair, enter into the debate, he ſhall be fined ſixpence.

IX.

The preſident omitting to call the fines, incurs an equal fine himſelf.

X.

The preſident omitting to ſign the minutes, after they are read by the ſecretary, is liable to a fine of two ſhillings and ſixpence.

XI.

The preſidents may call an extraordinary meeting by giving forty eight hours notice.

XII.

No preſident can depute any perſon to officiate for him but another preſident. In abſence of all the preſidents, the oldeſt member takes the chair.

XIII.

The preſident may prevent any member from ſpeaking more than twice on the ſame ſubject, during private buſineſs.

CHAP.

CHAP. V.

OF THE TREASURER.

I.

A treaſurer ſhall be elected on the ſame day the preſidents are choſen. He ſhall have the funds of the Society entruſted to his care, and ſhall be reſponſible for them. He ſhall give in a ſtate of them on the firſt meeting of January every year, or at any time he ſhall be called on by the Society ſo to do. Should he prove negligent in his office, he may at any time be depoſed, and another elected in his place.

II.

The treaſurer, after being ordered to pay an accompt due by the Society, ſhall produce a diſcharge for it at next meeting.

III.

At the laſt meeting for the ſeaſon, the treaſurer ſhall bring forward an account of his intromiſſions, under the penalty of five ſhillings.

CHAP.

CHAP. VI.

OF THE SECRETARY.

I.

A ſecretary ſhall be choſen out of the members of the Society, to be determined in the ſame manner as the election of preſidents.

II.

He ſhall take care of the fines, provide the neceſſaries the Society ſhall require, and call the roll. He ſhall alſo inſert in a book provided for the purpoſe, all the minutes of the evening previous to next meeting, which ſhall be ſigned by the preſident.

III.

The Secretary for every neglect of duty ſhall be fined ſixpence, if the Society thinks proper.

IV.

He ſhall attend at the Society's Hall a quarter before the hour of meeting, under the penalty of one ſhilling.

V.

The Secretary ſhall tranſcribe the Diſſertations and queſtions, in a fair and legible hand, into the Society's Books, and ſhall be paid two pence per page for the former, and one ſhilling each, for the latter, by the authors.

VI.

Members neglecting to give in their Diſſertations or Queſtions, to the Secretary, at the meeting previous to their diſcuſſion, ſhall incur a fine of two ſhillings and ſixpence; beſides paying ſixpence per page to the Secretary for after enrolment.

VII.

If the Secretary neglect to tranſcribe the Diſſertations or Queſtions, after receiving them in due time he ſhall incur a fine of one ſhilling.

VIII.

If the Secretary returns a Diſſertation to the author, after receiving it for tranſcription, he ſhall incur a fine of five ſhillings.

IX.

Members leaving the town indebted to the Secretary, ſhall be conſidered and treated as Debtors to the Society.

X.

No minute or part of a minute once wrote can be eraſed, but a correction, alteration, or explanation of any improper or ambiguous paragraph, may be inſerted in a ſubſequent minute by order of a majority.

XI.

Members diſſatisfied with the proceedings of a majority of the Society may enter a proteſt in the minutes, ſtating their reaſons therefore, upon paying ſixpence each to the Secretary.

CHAP. VII.

OF THE ADMISSION F MEMBERS.

I.

Petitions for ſeats may be ballotted for, as ſoon as preſented, and one negative in ſix ſhall be ſufficient to reject.

II.

Every petition for an ordinary ſeat muſt be ſupported by one or more of the members preſent, certifying the propriety of ſuch petitioner being admitted.

III.

Each member, on admiſſion, ſhall pay the ſum of five ſhillings; and ſixpence for a copy of the Laws.

IV.

Each petitioner neglecting to ſign the obligation, incurs a fine of one ſhilling for abſence, the firſt night after the admiſſion of his petition, two ſhillings if abſent the ſecond, and if he does not attend the third, he is ipſo facto expelled.

V.

No petition ſhall be balloted for more than once the ſame evening, unleſs on a diſcovery of a miſtake in the ballot; which muſt be declared previous to announcing the ſtate of the ballot.

VI.

No petition ſhall be received from the ſame candidate oftener than three times during the courſe of the ſeſſion.

VII.

Admiſſions into the Society may take place at any regular meeting, either during the winter or ſummer ſeſſion.

VIII.

Members who have once reſigned, cannot be readmitted, but by a majority, and then not without paying half the admiſſion money over again.

CHAP. VIII.

OF EXTRAORDINARY MEMBERS.

I.

Extraordinary members ſhall be entitled to all the privileges of ordinary members, and ſhall be exempted from fines of roll-calls and contributions.

II.

Extraordinary members, who are elected preſidents, become ſubject to the ſame laws as ordinary members, as long as they continue in office.

III.

Any phyſician or ſurgeon may be admitted an extraordinary member, upon paying the uſual admiſſion money and agreeing to write one ſet of papers.

IV.

Ordinary members are qualified for becoming extraordinary members, a month after the diſcuſſion of their ſecond ſet of papers and queſtions, in the ſecond ſeſſion of their attendance.

V.

Members who have attended one ſeſſion, diſcuſſed one ſet of papers, and taken a degree or ſurgeon's diploma, ſhall be alſo qualified for becoming extraordinary members.

VI.

Members thus qualified, previous to their being enrolled as extraordinary members, muſt pay half a crown to the treaſurer.

CHAP. IX.

OF COMMITTEES.

I.

A committee of Motions, conſiſting of five, ſhall be appointed monthly.

II.

A committee of fines, conſiſting of five, ſhall be appointed monthly, to attend a quarter before ſix each evening, for the conſideration of appeals.

III.

The mode of appointing committees ſhall be as follows:—The preſident ſhall nominate one member, who ſhall name a ſecond, and ſo on, until the number requiſite be completed.

IV.

Members of committees ſhall be fined one ſhilling, if they neglect to attend the buſineſs, for which they were appointed.

CHAP. X.

OF MOTIONS.

I.

All motions muſt ly on the table for one week, if objected to.

II.

Every motion ſhall be determined by a majority; and when there happens an equality of votes, the preſident in the chair ſhall, (under the penalty of five ſhillings) give a caſting vote, viva voce.

III.

If any motion be rejected or withdrawn, the propoſer, (unleſs ſeconded by the committee of motions,) ſhall incur the penalty of one ſhilling.

CHAP. XI.

OF APPEALS.

I.

No excuſe ſhall be admitted for non-attendance, except ſickneſs, attendance at a medical lecture, or delivery, or abſence more than two miles from town.

II.

No appeal ſhall be held valid, unleſs previouſly entered in the appeal-book.

III.

No appeals for fines, impoſed by the preſident for irregularities, ſhall be received, unleſs in the form of accuſation againſt the preſident.

IV.

Such accuſations ſhall be judged of by the Society, and if found valid, the preſident ſhall pay the fine himſelf: but if judged futile, the accuſer ſhall pay five ſhillings, over and above the fine impoſed.

V.

No appeal for abſence at a lecture can be ſuſtained, after the firſt of December, unleſs the appellant has a ticket for the whole courſe.

CHAP. XII.

OF DISSERTATIONS.

I.

On the laſt Friday in October, the two oldeſt members, who had not wrote the former winter, ſhall give in the one a diſſertation, and the other a queſtion, for next night's diſcuſſion, and proceed regularly in the ſame manner, according to ſeniority, till the end of the ſeſſion.

II.

Phyſicians and ſurgeons admitted extraordinary members, ſhall diſcuſs their diſſertations and queſtions, firſt in rotation after thoſe old members, who, by writing a ſecond ſet of papers, have acquired extraordinary ſeats.

III.

Members prevented from giving in diſſertations or queſtions in rotation, by ſickneſs or abſence from town, ſhall be the firſt to diſcuſs papers on their return to the Society.

IV.

Any member not giving in his diſſertations at the time appointed, ſhall be fined five ſhillings for each neglect. If abſent during the diſcuſſion of his paper, more than ten minutes, he ſhall incur the penalty of two ſhillings and ſixpence; and if abſent the whole night, ſhall pay five ſhillings, beſides the uſual penalty of non-attendance.

V.

Thoſe who have diſcuſſed diſſertations or queſtions, ſhall perform the office of impugners the ſucceeding evening, under the penalty of one ſhilling

VI.

At the firſt meeting in January, the members who have to write for the ſeaſon, ſhall condeſcend upon the ſubjects of their diſſertations, which are not to be changed, under the penalty of two ſhillings and ſixpence.

VII.

No ſenior member, who has already wrote one ſet of papers, is allowed to write again for a junior member; but junior members who have not wrote at all may exchange opportunities with each other by permiſſion of the Society.

CHAP. XIII.

OF MISCELLANEOUS BUSINESS.

I.

The fines ſhall be collected every week, and any gentleman neglecting for a month to diſcharge ſuch fines, ſhall incur a penalty of one ſhilling weekly for ſuch neglect after that period.

II.

Any member divulging the ſecrets of the Society, ſhall incur a penalty of five ſhilling

III.

No member can be expelled, or his conduct enquired into in his abſence, without notice duely given him at a previous meeting.

IV.

Petitions for leave of abſence muſt be preſented in writing, to be determined by ballot, the week after.

V.

No member can have leave of abſence for more than a month, but may preſent another petition at the end of that period, if the neceſſity of his affairs is very urgent.

VI.

No member who is indebted to the Society, or within ſix weeks of giving in his diſſertation or queſtion, can petition for leave of abſence, a diploma, or leave to reſign.

VII.

Members, who have leave of abſence, are not allowed to ſpeak or vote in private buſineſs.

VIII.

No member can be elected into any office in his abſence.

IX.

No office-bearer can reſign his ſeat as a member, but may at any time reſign his office.

X.

No petition for reſignation can be received but at the laſt meeting in November.

XI.

The names of members who have reſigned their ſeats in the ſociety, are not to be inſerted in any future edition of the Laws.

XII.

At the firſt meeting in February there ſhall be an annual contribution of one ſhilling for reprinting the laws or appendix. And this contribution ſhall alſo be paid by members admitted after that period.

XIII.

Any member leaving Edinburgh, indebted to the ſociety in the ſum of two ſhillings and ſixpence or upwards, ſhall ipſo facto be expelled.

XIV.

Any gentleman indebted to the ſociety in the ſum of ſix ſhillings or upwards, for more than two months, ſhall be expelled.

XV.

Every member who has been expelled the ſociety, ſhall have his name inſerted in the printed editions of the laws, with the word EXPELLED annexed to it, and the cauſe thereof.

XVI.

No gentleman is permitted to ſtand before the fire under the penalty of ſixpence.

XVII.

The penalty for the violation of any law not otherwiſe ſpecified, ſhall be one ſhilling.

XVIII.

Members remaining in town during the ſummer ſeaſon, may have the privilege of holding meetings in the ſociety's hall, and recording their tranſactions in the minute book; but muſt do ſo at their own expence, and without altering or repealing any of the ſociety's laws.

CHAP. XIV.

OBLIGATION.

I pledge my word and honour to exert myſelf to the utmoſt of my power, to promote the intereſt, honour, and reputation of this Society, and never will join in or agree to any meaſures, directly or indirectly, whatever for the deſtruction of the original inſtitution, or the alienation of its books or other property. I alſo engage, as long as I attend the ſociety, to be ſtrictly obedient to all its laws and regulations, and to ſee that every one, who is admitted a member thereof, bind himſelf by theſe ſame above written engagements, as I do by ſigning my name to them in preſence of the ſociety.

CHAP. XV.

OF DIPLOMAS.

I.

Any gentleman may petition for a Diploma, which ſhall be granted him, unleſs diſapproved of by one third of the ſociety.

II.

No gentleman can have a diploma, if he is indebted to the ſociety.
